*Life is a minute, Only 60 seconds in it,
Forced upon you, Can't refuse it,
Didn't choose it, But It's up to you to use it,
You must suffer if you lose it; Give an account if you abuse it,
Just a tiny little minute, But eternity is in it.*

One of the biggest problems that I see people wrestle with is overcoming procrastination. People waste far too much time with insignificant activities when that time could be used fulfilling their purpose and having a greater impact on the world. Time is our most precious and valuable commodity and up to this point no scientist or scholar has figured out how to get it back once it's gone so it's important to use every minute you have wisely. It's important as you work toward unlocking your success that you understand the importance of time and become a good steward of it.

A successful person's goal is to always be better today than they were yesterday.

What do Bill Gates, Oprah Winfrey, Donald Trump, Sam Walton and You all have in common? The answer: God gives each of them 24 hours a day. No one gets a single nanosecond more yet four out of the five listed are Billionaires. The first four made a decision to make the most out of everyday and to milk everything they could out of every minute while they were building their success. How much TV do you think Bill Gates watched when he was creating the largest software company in the world, Microsoft? How many bowling nights did Oprah Winfrey go to while she was building one of the most powerful media empires in the world, Harpo? How much sleep do you think Donald Trump got when he was buying half of the real estate in New York City? Do you really think Sam Walton was just hanging out with the fellas when he built Wal-Mart? Now what about you? What are you willing to give up in order to be the next success story? When are you going to start taking life seriously and stop wasting the time you were blessed with and use it to do what you were put here to do?

Successful people are willing to do now what others don't so later on they can have what others won't.

Statistics show that the average human lifespan is 79.5 years. That means if you're 20 years old, you have about 700 months left to live. If you're 30 years old, you have about 600 months left. A 40-year-old person has about 480 months left to live and a 50 year old has about 320 months left to live. When compared to the eternity of God and to the 30-40 Billion years of Earth's existence, even 700 months seems like but a minute. Unfortunately we were not given the luxury of deciding how much time we have, nor can we put life in reverse and take advantage of the time we let pass us by, but each day we can make a decision as to how we will spend those 24 hours. It is that daily decision that when life is all said and done will leave you saying either, "I sure am glad I used my time wisely" or "I wish I would've used my time more wisely". Everyone's life is busy. Life is never going to stop and say "Here's the free time you asked for" so it is up to you to make the time to grow and take the time you need to become successful.

Your destiny is waiting on you. It's waiting on you to make a decision to stop dreaming about your purpose and start walking in it.

Turn off the TV, cancel guys/ladies night out, skip bowling this month and do something productive with all that time you “don’t” have. Future generations are depending on you making the most out of today so they may have a better tomorrow. The average person only has 300-700 months to make their impact on the world, don’t let yours waste away.
