It's not often that we come across a network training tool that (according to its author) is so simple to use that in eight minutes an eight-year old can teach an eight-year old how to use it.

At first we doubted this claim, but after taking a good look at "DeckWork Marketing à la Card", Michael Linden's comprehensive introduction to the principles of network marketing, we were convinced. This deck has 52 cards that every network marketer should have up their sleeve, to keep themselves on track and to educate their new distributors; better yet, every company should include it in their distributor kits!

Linden has had a torturous path in the industry, starting in 1972 in South Africa, where he fell in love with the promise of working for himself and earning residual income. After 18 years, a dozen companies, and no "serious" residual income, he found a product that he believed in: the floodgates opened and the results were impressive: he went on to become a million dollar earner, and now is invited to speak at network gatherings about overcoming sponsorship and training challenges by keeping it simple. As a result, DeckWork Marketing à la Card is gaining wide acceptance and is now used in companies as diverse as Avon, Simplexity, and Amazon Herb; it is endorsed by leading distributors in the industry including Robert Butwin, Jordan Adler, Ron Bond, Izzy Matos, and many more. Linden was recently nominated into the MLMIA Hall of Fame. You'll find plenty of high-powered testimonials at www.DeckWorkMarketing.com/testimonials.php

Linden says up to 80% of all support materials end up on bookshelves, unread or unheard, because they're too long, too linear, and contain too much fluff.

> "That means most distributors aren't getting the basic principles and as a result duplication isn't happening. Distributors have GOT to get the basics… after all, duplication implies that networkings underlying principles are not only CLEARLY understood, but are also embraced in the field. That's why I decided to produce DeckWork Marketing à la Card*. We were losing sight of the real, and simple, dynamics that make this industry work so well."*

If, as the deck says, "50% of success is showing up… the other 50% is having the right tools," then show up and stack the deck in your favor with this unique, useful, and duplicatable tool.
