Picture how you want your life to look like. How does your business look, your family, where you want to live, what kind of car you want drive.

A clear vision of your ultimate life will help you to pursue your dreams, achieve goals and open your mind to endless possibilities.

Your vision should be challenging to put into action. You will realize it only by setting realistic and demanding goals, and then going after them day by day with your team of people who are committed to their visions.

Your vision will help you overcome the challenges of day to day life and help you focus and create a purpose in reaching your greatest potential.

One of the visions George and I had was to live on the beach in Boca Raton, FL. For many years we lived nowhere near the beach. We weren't sure how or when it would happen. But the vision was clear. It could not be across the street from the beach, or down the street from the beach, it was on the beach. About three years ago we moved into a beautiful condo on the beach! When the vision is clear and you never give up things will happen.

It is important to take an objective look back at times you wished would have gone differently, decisions that were made, sickness, lost opportunities, the times in your life that did not bring you closer to your vision. Write them down and then symbolically toss them away, so you can feel like you have a fresh start.

What George and I found when we moved into the place we dreamed of for so many years, there was not a moment where we stopped and thought this is the moment we have waited for, rather a piece of a daily journey that was accomplished. There was so much more to work toward.

Our son is graduating from college this month. It will be fun to see what vision he creates in his life and watch him take his journey.

At the end of the day we are all champions for giving our hearts, our time and out sincere efforts.

Good luck! Stay strong and committed to your ultimate vision!
