MEETINGS | LEADERSHIP | PERSONAL GROWTH | MOTIVATION

A Plastic Chair Worth $1 Million

How can you find that chair, what would you have to do make that happen?

by Sean G. Murphy

471 words | 2 pages

Now before you start searching on Google or somewhere to see what made that chair so incredible, let me be the first to let you know that you probably have been in a Million Dollar chair already today. I can almost guarantee that you sat in a Million Dollar chair today. Let me explain.

I have the opportunity to speak around the world to audiences from all nations and backgrounds.

> I see people attend meetings and seminars only to leave the information they acquired somewhere between the meeting room and their car. They just don't begin the process to implement what they just learned. Now there are those that will take the information and turn it into gold.

It's those people that take that experience and do something with it, that turn any chair into a million dollars or more. I have spent many years in the Network Marketing arena, and I have watched this happen time and time again. Someone comes to their first meeting and drink in the information and immediately turn it into a massive fortune. So how can you do that, what would you have to do make that happen?

1. Attend events with an end in mind. What is it that you want from the time you are going to spend at the event? What is the most important topic you need to learn more about, hear more about so that you achieve a higher level of understanding? If you were to ask yourself these questions when you go into any kind of meeting, you will gather so much more understanding, you will be surprised at the results.

2. As you are writing your notes during the training or the event, take some time at the breaks to put a date next to the topics, when you plan to implement that idea or suggestion. Now if you really want to crystallize the power of the information, imagine having a plan when you leave the meeting or event, and you know when you will begin to put the information into practice. You will also find that when you date the notes, it drives you to make sure that you put the thoughts into action.

I have shared these suggestions with my students, and I use this as well. The results people receive from implementing just these couple of thoughts has been amazing. So next time you are sitting in a chair that may not be all that comfortable, just remember, if you play your thoughts right, it could be worth $1,000,000 dollars.

Sean Murphy
YourVisionPartners.com