COACHING | PERSONAL GROWTH | PSYCHOLOGY | THINKING

Obey the Laws, Break the Rules

There are certain laws that exist that will bring you great success, if you are will in break the rules.

by Sean G. Murphy

490 words | 2 pages

Now before you get all worried that I am going to be giving some misguided suggestions here, let me explain.

There are certain laws that exist that will bring you great success, if you are willing to break the rules.

Let me see if I can explain it well enough, you are currently living by a set of rules that are governing your life. Rules on when you go to bed, what you eat, how you drive, etc. It's these rules you use to keep your life in order. What I am talking about are the Laws that exist that don't care about the rules you use, or how often you use them. The Laws that state unless you are willing to make some changes may not reach your full potential.

In the book Science of Getting Rich, you can find downloads all over the web, Wattles talks about the 7 universal laws that exist. My favorite is the Law of Relativity. Here is an easy way to explain it. The computer screen that you are reading this article on, is it bigger or smaller then the desk you are sitting at or the chair you are sitting in? The chance's are it is now, so screen is smaller in size. Now let me ask you if the screen is bigger or smaller then a typical credit card you may be carrying? I would have to guess that its bigger, right?

So how can it be both bigger and smaller without it changing its size? Well its because of the Law of Relativity, it is neither big nor small, it only takes on those qualities when compared to something else. With that being said, you have to maybe break some rules when you are talking about your finances, or weight gain, or weight loss. See it just is, and it is time that you eliminated the comparison of all that you do to something else.

Comparing a particular thing to something else, causes you to lose site of that which is right in front of you, and that is not going to bring you value as you go through life.

> You are what you are, and who you are right now, and comparing yourself to someone else is not going to bring you any more or less success.

Break the rule that what you do is relative to someone or something else, and live by the Law that it just is what it is. Watch how this single mindset change will bring you a new perspective to see more of what is right in front of you.

Sean Murphy
YourVisionPartners.com